

I work two blocks from WPVM on the 8th floor of a building downtown Asheville. I cannot listen to WPVM from here because a non local station from Knoxville, TN is broadcasting into our area and interfering with our local low-power FM station. Due to our mountainous terrain, WPVM should be allowed some recourse so they can effectively broadcast in downtown Asheville, which would probably mean the station should be permitted to own its own translator. I also support the elimination of "third adjacent channel" spacing, which would revise the current band plan so that all FCC-licensed FM stations, both low- and high-power, can operate without interfering with each other.
